Cultural Politics and Balkan Music

Balkan music is often used to express political views and to negotiate identity. This is especially true in the diaspora, where Balkan musicians and communities are often faced with issues of discrimination and marginalization.

For example, during the Yugoslav Wars of the 1990s, many Balkan musicians used their music to express their opposition to the war and to promote peace and reconciliation. In the United States, Balkan musicians have also used their music to speak out against racism and discrimination.

In addition to expressing political views, Balkan music is also used to negotiate identity. For many Balkan immigrants and their descendants, Balkan music is a way to connect with their heritage and to feel a sense of belonging. It can also be a way to express their pride in their culture and to share it with others.
